DEDICATION

LOUIS J. BARRACATO

The editors of Catholic University Law Review proudly dedicate this issue to Assistant Professor Louis J. Barracato. For over ten years, Professor Barracato has distinguished himself at The Catholic University School of Law as a consummate teacher; his tireless and enthusiastic devotion to his students has been exceeded only by his keen imagination and good humor. Although he has made numerous contributions to the professional development of many aspiring lawyers over the years, his painstaking efforts at changing courtroom neophytes into proficient trial attorneys will undoubtedly have the greatest enduring significance. We wish him every success in his new endeavors and hope this issue will often remind him that his work was appreciated by those in academia who really matter the most.
